James K Engle

James  $\underline{K}$  Engle, progenitor of the Engle family in the original Huntington Ward, Emery Stake of Zion, came to this place from Glendale Kane Co., Utah in 1885-6, bringing with him his family of two wives and their children.

The family's first home here was a shanty on a farm he procured in the south-east fields adjacent to the "Town Hill." Later he built and kept a little store on the center front of Lot 4, Block 5 of Huntington townsite. The store was stocked with general merchandise. The first wife and her children lived in a lean-to built on the back of the store. Still later he procured Lot 2, Block 13 and built a concrete house there, which was occupied by the first wife and her children. The second wife lived in a dugout just north of the store until it caved in. She was too, caved in. Her husband quickly put up a cottonwood room where she and her children stayed until a better place was rented from Benjamin Black. It was her last home in Huntington.

James K Engle worked variously at stone masonry, painting, plasterall-round handy man, being able to apply himself to almost any kind of labor in his efforts to make a living for his family. He was an labor in his efforts to make a living for his family. He was artistically inclined, drawing his own designs for signs and for decorative purposes. He always mixed his own colors when painting, and he did last illness preceding his death, he was experimenting with cement as a means of molding tombstones. He placed at least one of these experimental markers - a lamb - at a child's grave in the cemetery here in Huntington. It did not withstand the weather, however. His formula was not sufficiently perfected.

In stature he was a trim-built man of about five feet nine inches tall and weighed about one hundred sixty pounds, was inclined to slenderness, but was not the rawboned type. In movement he was quick and graceful, steady in bearing, accurate in touch. In his prime his hair was black, and his eyes were black and piercing, and he wore his beard long. He was not an educated man in secular learning, but was intelligent through self-cultivation and native endowment. In his views he was independent and outspoken, never shrinking because of unpopularity of a cause or a principle. If he believed a thing he was not ashamed of his conviction.

From early boyhood his uppermost desire was to become a preacher, and a preacher is what he was above all else. Religiously be became a thoroughly converted Latter-day Saint. He was the first of his line to receive the Gospel and come into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He was not searched out and brought to Zion. On the contrary he searched diligently for the Gospel from the days of his youth until he found it in the year 1872. He was then in the state of Pennsylvania.

In 1874 he trudged across the plains from the Missouri river opposite Omaha to Fort Laramie, Wyoming, afoot and alone, to come to the body of the Saints. As soon thereafter as he could prepare for them, his wife, Nancy Umble, and baby Thomas came to joing him.

In 1880 he accepted the principle of polygamy and took a second wife, Syrena Dyson. He and family entered into the "United Order" of Orderville. He helped in the building of the Manti Temple. He filled a mission in Pennsylvania and returned from it in November 1882. While on his mission he and companion had the privilege of paptizing his father, one brother and two sisters. In March 1883 he left Orderville and moved to Glendale, Utah. In his journal he notes: "Was poor as could be. Had not even so much as a stove." About three years later he came to Huntington, which was his last move. Here in the original Huntington Ward his final years on earth were spent, and here in Huntington he lies buried, awaiting the resurrection morn.

In Priesthood he attained to the office of Seventy, being ordained lith February 1877 by Arza E. Hinkley. His Seventy's license is still among his papers. It is No. 279, Book A, issued 25th March 1883.

After coming to Huntington, he, with others of the early settlers, was hounded by United States officers because of polygamy. He served a term in the Utah State Penitentury for this cause. He was one of the body of the Priesthood in attendance at the General Conference October 6th, 1890 when the "Manifesto" was voted on. With tears in his eyes he voted for it.

Perhaps no more effective testimonial of his character could come than from out prison walls, and so such a testimonial concludes this sketch of him.

"Sugar Station; Salt Lake City, Utah.
May 5th, 1908.

To Whom It May Concern:

In behalf of James  $\underline{K}$  Engle, who has served his time in the Utah State Prison and leaves said institution tomorrow, May 6, 1908, I wish to make mention of a few facts in regards to his conduct, etc., while here; as the same may be of some benefit to him in future.

I never met Bro. Engle until he came to this institution, and may never meet him again in this life, although 'twould be a pleasure to do so.

not say that any remarks I may record herein will be of any to him. One thing sure they can do him no harm.

Personally, by and through his actions, I have Learned the worth of Bro. Engle, and regard him as a learned and experienced man of God. Bro. Engle has been under my jurisdiction daily for thirteen months. As to his past record I know nothing, nor am I sufficiently curious to try and find out. Am simply speaking of the man as he has appeared to me while here, and truthfully believe that he is worthy the special consideration of any of those whom may have jurisdiction over him any time in the future. I have found Bro. Engle to be truthful, even to a fault, extremely honorable, honest and trustworthy. Has always worked hard while here, and seemed to take pleasure in doing so. Has always been obedient, and has seemingly done all in his power to obey all rules, so far as I have ever had anything to do with him.

As to his moral character, I have no way of judging, only as he has appeared to me, and certainly he seems to be strictly moral in every respect, and so far as I have any knowledge of things pertaining to the Gospel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and so far as I would be permitted to say, I believe Bro. Engle to be a faithful Latter-day Saint, and fully endowed with a spirit of the Gospel. He has talked to me a whole lot concerning the Gospel. I have always been very much taken up with his talk, and 'twas a pleasure to me to listen any time when my duties would allow, and were I asked

OFFICE COPA. DOCK

With the exception of Lilly, only one other descendant of James Kap Engle now lives in Huntington. She is his great-grand daughter, Foresta Gilson Nielson, who was married in Manti temple in June 1960 to Wilford Ray Nielson, a descendant of the pioneer Jens Nielson family. Foresta filled a mission in Great Britain before marriage. Currently she is teaching in Sunday School. Her occupation since graduating from school has been that of working in banks.

Lilly, eldest daughter of the second wife, was born in Glendale, Utah, and was brought to Huntington by her parents when she was two or three years old. During girlhood she lived a short time in Spring Glen and Castle Gate, Utah respectively, and one winter in Cleveland, Utah. After marriage she lived about one year in Scofield, Utah. Except for these short periods, she lived in the original Huntington Ward until it was divided. Since then she has lived in Huntington Second Ward. She is now (October 1961) seventy-eight years old, making roughly seventy years her life and experiences have been interwoven with those of her contemporaries in the Huntington wards.

She was married in the Salt Lake temple in 1898 to Joseph Dumayne, husband of her deceased and oldest sister Nancy Jane Engle.

To Lilly Engle and Joseph Dumayne were born five children, after which she was divorced from him, and the sealing to him in the temple was cancelled 3rd July 1909 by President Joseph F. Smith. She then resumed her maiden name.

During her life with Joseph Dumayne they lived on a farm south-west of town, in Huntington, which he sold to Johnson H. Majors following the divorce.

To support her three children (two died in infancy) she worked at whatever she could find to do. Besides raising a vegetable garden she went out much helping in the homes of others. For a number of years she did practical nursing. She served as correspondent for the Emery County Progress for awhile, and taught a mixed school at Desert Lake, Utah, one year. After her children were married she served a number of years as city recorder.

About the year 1912 she was appointed by her father to serve as genealogist of his house, and her father and she commenced a genealogy fund that there might be means for financing the work. This was before Edward took over the financial responsibility.

Preceding his death, her father appointed her to serve as his writer, and he left his records in her charge.

Throughout the years of her adult life she has engaged in genealogical research and family records. Several times she has participated in efforts to promote a family organization of the Engle family, and in Mañch 1959 she set forth for the consideration of her own posterity a contemplated family organization for their sakes.

In church service she has been active in the wards throughout the years, having served as teacher or secretary or in other capacity in one or another of the auxiliaries or other service units of the wards. At the time the original ward ran a budget picture show she served on the ward Budget Committee and had the responsibility of selecting the pictures and of ordering and returning the films.

Leath, daughter of the first wife, was the baby of the family. She was still a baby when her father was imprisoned for being a polygamist. In his journal her father wrote: "Aug. 8, 1891, about three o'clock in the morning, two U. S. marshalls, Mr. Monihan and Mr. Parson, guided by Hyrum Curtis, came to my house and arrested me on a charge of unlawful cohabitation."

Leath has lived in widowhood most of her adult life, raising her four children in very adverse circumstances until they became old enough to help themselves. She lived first in Cedarview, Utah, then in Salt Lake City. From there she moved to California, and recently back to Salt Lake City, Utah. She likes to write verses and paint pictures, though she has not become skilled in these lines.

Emma and her husband with their little children first lived in Price, Utah. When the Uintah Indian Reservation was thrown open her husband drew a piece of land at what later became Cedarview, Utah. They moved onto this farm and remained at Cedarview until a store they owned burned and the Depression depleted them of most everything else. They then moved to Salt Lake City. There Emma spent much effort and all the time she had free from her home obligations doing genealogical research and temple work.

Emma has been a faithful woman all her life, faithful to her parents, faithful to her husband and children and a faithful church worker. She is an excellent cook and hundreds of people have eaten at her table, which is always generously and freely spread. Her virtues are many; her faults, few. She is now a widow, her husband having died. Her home is in Salem, Utah, where she lives alone at the age of eighty-two.

Edward remained single until he was forty years old, when he married Susannah Chidester, also of Huntington, and they had ten of their eleven children born here in the original ward before they moved away, first to one ward and then another. It seems, however, that their church membership remained registered here. It was on record in the Second Ward at the time of Edward's death. He lies buried here in Huntington cemetery near his father.

His principal occupation was sheep shearing, at which he became expert and made good wages. He did some painting, worked on the thrashing machine and took in other odd jobs between sheep shearing seasons. His hobby was prospecting. He was very interested in minerals and gained considerable knowledge of them through book study and through observation during his prospecting. He was working a uranium claim and was getting some of the product on the market awhile before his death.

In family organization Edward vover in his father's stead at his appointed by his father to assist of his father's house, especially was appointed by his father to take s father's death. Also he was t'with the genealogical responsibilities the financial end. This he did.

Bro. Engle, in regards to religion, I agree with you in its entirety. The Gospel is undoubtedly true. I believe all of it heart and soul, and as to sealing that also is absolutely necessary as well as all other commandments received by the Prophet and handed down to the present time. I agree with you, Bro. Engle, and hope the day will soon come when I can feel that I am worthy to continue farther along the line pertaining to the Gospel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints, and while I may never hear from Bro Engle again in this life, I shall always feel that I was better through having had the privilege of conversing with him and listening to his sound logic."

The Wives

Polygamous wives of true type they were, indeed. As song proclaims of the "Two Little Girls In Blue," it could be said of these two women that "two better girls never lived than they." There was no friction between them. The children of both were as welcome in the home of one as of the other. Their children were never allowed to speak of each other as "half brothers and sisters," and for any one outside the family to speak of them as such was an insult.

The first wife was considerably older than the second. She was ladylike in appearance and manner, sedate and somewhat quiet, that is, she was not boistrous or loud in either talk or laughter. She was the village school teacher while living in Glendale; also taught school in Orderville.

The second wife was more frolicksome and joyous in personality. possessed a rich Woice and sang like a bird in tones sweet and clear

The first wife was an expert seamstress. In fact, she wove the cloth and stitched by hand the suit in which her husband left for the mission field. Many are the willow baskets she wove, the hair switch she made, the straw hats she braided and bleached. She was a good gardner, cultivated flowers and small fruits and had an orchard of some of the best fruit in town. She loved the out-of-doors life and was calm and fearless. In sharing with others she deplored giving to another something not as good as she kept for herself or her own.

The second wife could spread a table with cookery that would "mein your mouth." With her voice she might have become a prima dona. Instead she majored in otherhood. Her stage was the rockingchair, where she whiled fretful babes to the land of Nod. Her life's work was sealed by death in childbirth. "melt

Of the thirteen children of James K Engle and his two wives, five were born in Huntington, namely, Esta and Katy Leath, daughters of the first wife, and Willie, Ellis and Ida Grace, children of the second wife. The other children, except Lilly and Edward, moved to other wards when they grew up. However, Esta was married here to James William Nielson, a member of the original Huntington Ward, and their first child, Elma, was born here before they moved away. Emma and Leath, not having lived here since Emma married, and since Leath was but a girl, most of their life experiences, of course, are associated with communities elsewhere. Also the mothers of the family moved away. The first wife died in Cedarview, Utah; the second wife, in Price, Utah.

Willie, the first child, son of the first wife, died in Iowa when little more than a year old. His mother has told how his black baby eyes would snap at his father if his father "got after him."

Willie, the second wife's son, died when less than five years old as the result of drinking lye, mistaking it for milk. His throat was obadly burned that the little fellow literally starved to death. Though afflicted and though so young, he was the epitome of nobility

Tommy, son of the first wife, died when eight years old. That was at the time his father was working on the Manti temple and had taken time off to go to the Endowment House in Salt Lake City to marry the second wife. It took considerable time to make the trip by team. When he returned he found his little boy dead.

Nancy, daughter of the first wife, lived in Castle Gate after marrying. She died in Huntington at her mother's home about eight months following her marriage, the cause being premature childbirth. Nancy was an exceptionally gifted woman. She was a "born" artist; also could write, preach, teach or do almost anything. She did not like house work and got out of it to an extent that some teased her by singing:

"I'm good-for-nothing Nancy, So the people say; Work is not my fancy, I'd rather be at play."

play was with her pencil sketching pictures or writing composs. Like her mother she was calm and fearless. Like her father, d marked spirituality and mentality.

Esta died in Cedarview, Utah after becoming the mother of three children. She dearly loved babies and little children. In aptitude she was a nurse. In stature she was perhaps the smallest child of the family, and had the longest, finest and most abundant head of hair. When a child how she used to cry when her hair had to be combed. It was so long and snarled so easily and she was so tender-headed.

Jim, Rosy and Ellis, children of the second wife, moved to Kansas. Jim married a widow there. Rosy and Ellis each married in Missouri. Jim died in Kansas; Ellis died in Wisconsin. Rosy returned with her family to Utah, coming to Huntington where they remained a short time Later they went to Spring Glen, Utah, and finally to Salt Lake City

Such service was pronounced by Bishop Frank L. Hall, when he was bishop of Huntington Second Ward, to be Welfare service.

The Glitter of Tears

This concludes a brief history of the Engle Family as one of twelve families recently selected as representative families from the pioneer stock of the original Huntington Ward.

Some details of the history of this family are written in records of some members of the family, and many incidents might be written which would evidence that the experiences of the family were not all "peaches and cream." There were plenty of ups and downs incident to family life. But who cares about them now? They were not the objective and are not the end.

Paraphrasing some lines -

It's easy enough to be pleasant When life flows along like a song, But the family worthwhile Is the one that can smile Over things that once were dead wrong.

If there were no thorns and thistles of experience to afflict and torment man in his struggle to multiply and replenish the earth with generations of posterity, the decree of the Almighty would fail of fulfillment. Since by the Almighty's decree old things shall pass away, the thorns and thistles of family life may pass as old things to make way for the triumphs over them.

Yes, under the there were thorny experiences and thistles teardrops flow, aplenty, and they

"But when your tears are dried You find that home is dearer Than it was, and sanctified."

In the curve of eternal progression you find that the mistakes, faults and failings were not chronic ailments of family life. They were afflictions incidental to growth toward a high and glorious maturity.

The foregoing sketch is based on the K Engle and other family records in my possession a knowledge. e journal of James and on personal Ruth A. G. Anderson Lott and I met together and carefully went over the credential for the James K Engle representative family.

Inasmuch as I prepared the credential, it was deemed fitting that some one other than I should examine and pass on it. At my request Ruth performed this service, she being historian of the Huntington First Ward, and having been directed by her bishop to work in cooperation with me and give all the assistance she could.
